Sharing the Family Business in Guatemala

Submitted by jcupp on April 28, 2015

Francisco Hermoso, 16, uses a machine to separate the outer cherry-colored shell from coffee beans at his home in the highlands of Guatemala with his father Antonio Hermoso Matomb. A USAID-supported technician is helping his family use new technology and better methods for growing coffee. Francisco's father gave him a portion of the family farm to own and operate with the hope that his son will stick around to run the farm and continue to contribute to the community instead of traveling away for work. Photo by Greg Kahn for USAID
