Escaping Malnutrition in Guatemala

Submitted by jcupp on April 28, 2015

This child was formerly categorized as malnourished but has recovered. Her family is attending a nutrition course at the national hospital in Chimaltenango, Guatemala, where they also received supplemental food aid. Guatemala coordinates food security programming through its Secretariat for Food Security and Nutrition (or SESAN), which involves relevant government institutions, donors and civil society. This activity was coordinated by SESAN, which USAID supports. Photo by Michel A. Armenta
