Ambassador Kirk Travels to Tanzania

Ambassador Kirk is in Tanzania this week to highlight the Obama Administration's commitment to support Tanzania's leadership through initiatives like the Millennium Challenge Account, the Partnership for Growth and Feed the Future. He is also highlighting the important role that trade and investment can play in Tanzania's economic growth. His visit includes meetings with various government and business leaders to discuss the current and potential positive economic impact of U.S.-Tanzania trade and investment.

This morning, Ambassador Kirk met with leaders of several U.S. tourism companies, which are critical to Tanzania's foreign exchange generation, job creation and infrastructure development in Tanzania. Travel and tourism services earned nearly $1.2 billion in 2009 for Tanzania, and these U.S. companies are some of the largest contributors to building Tanzania's economy. The U.S. is committed to working closely with Tanzania to ensure the continued growth and sustainability of this vital sector.
