

Feed the Future Country Fact Sheet

Online Version: <https://feedthefuture.gov/article/private-sector-partners-convene-address-global-hunger-and-food-security>

Private Sector Partners Convene to Address Global Hunger and Food Security

USDA

USAID Administrator Shah addresses a group of U.S. Government and private sector partners at the Forum on February 22.

Last week, representatives from the private sector joined U.S. Government colleagues—from the Departments of Agriculture, Commerce, and State; USAID; and the Overseas Private Investment Corporation—to discuss potential areas of partnership in support of Feed the Future, the Administration's global hunger and food security initiative.

The Feed the Future Public-Private Partnership Technical Forum was one of many Feed the Future outreach efforts, which have included ongoing consultations with host nations; monthly consultations with civil society; and continuing engagement with the academic community, which was particularly important in the creation of the Feed the Future Research Strategy. The forum is part of an all-hands-on deck approach to doubling agricultural productivity to meet projected demand for food in 2050, which is a daunting goal—particularly in light of global challenges such as water availability, climate change, and energy.

- Read the full blog post on the White House website

Additional Resources:

- Read the summary report from the Forum (pdf, 168kb)
- Watch the opening and closing plenary sessions of the Forum on YouTube
- Read our newsletter article on the event
- Read an article on the event by the U.S. Department of State's IIP Digital
- Read a blog post from USDA on the event and public-private partnerships
- Visit the event page to view the complete agenda, discussion papers, and other related information